

Atypical Account Activities emails

As of September 25th 2018:

In an effort to ensure that swift action is taken by end users in case of suspicious activity, ADAMS will send users (including athletes) email alerts when its notices unusual account activities. This feature cannot be disabled and is triggered by the following events:

- Password modifications: password reset request, password resets by the custodian
- Modification of an account status: when accounts are temporarily locked by the system or unlocked by the custodian.
- Login from a new location: logging in from a new country for example
- Login from a untrusted device: using a new browser (coming soon)
